

I have subscribed to XM satellite radio since June 2003 and enjoy it so much that when I purchased my new vehicle I had it installed there also. Satellite radio is outstanding, especially when traveling. I never have to worry about where there is a station, or even if there is one in the area.

Having weather available at all times where ever you are is a neccesity and not something that is nice to have.

Broadcasters have tried to restrict my rights to satellte for years, first for television and now for radio.

I know of no rules that say my right to listen to what I choose should be restricted because someone is afraid that their business will suffer. In school I learned that competition between businesses is called capitalism on which our economic system is based.

If the NAB wants my business they should have to earn it, not have the government force them on me.
